

Institute for Innovation in Education

The Institute is dedicated to networking within the Salzburg University of Teacher Education and with external cooperation partners in the field of education. Interdisciplinary projects in research and teaching are anchored in this institute, current needs are identified and contemporary projects for improving practice are developed. Key areas, centres and overarching project groups are located in this institute.

Tasks:

- Promotion and coordination of cooperative projects in research and teaching at the University of Education Salzburg
- Networking of the areas of initial, continuing and further education and, in particular, research
- Pooling of research-related competences from the areas of initial, continuing and further education
- Implementing measures for professionalisation in field-related research at the University of Education Salzburg (staff development)
- Promoting networking with the practical schools
- Establishing the practical schools as research schools in the sense of places for linking empiricism-theory-practice as well as generating interest in research among (high) school actors.
- Analysis of current developments in the field of education and development of context-specific offers to improve practice
- Taking up and setting current educationally relevant as well as future-oriented topics and developing strategies for their implementation
- Promoting and coordinating cooperative projects in research and teaching with external national and international cooperation partners
